My beautiful little girl, Rayne

I've been lurking here for a while, so I figure it's about time for me to introduce the world to my darling cat, Rayne!

I adopted her on July 8th 2006 from the West Warwick Volunteer Animal Shelter in Rhode Island. She was only 9 weeks old. Her exact birth date is unknown so I celebrate her birthday each year on May 1st. According to the lady running the shelter, Rayne was dropped off at the shelter one morning with her 2 sisters and her brother. All four kittens were solid black from head to toe. They were WAY too young to be away from their mama cat, so she took them home to foster them. All four kittens were bottle fed. Rayne was the runt of the litter, but she was also the kitty in charge! Her foster mom called her Jenny, and she liked to show Lizzie, Hailey and Sebastian (her siblings) who was boss!

I'll never forget the day I met her. I was going through a rough time, and I really needed a friend. My mom saw her sister Lizzie on pet finder and showed me the picture. I started scrolling through the other cats in that shelter, and then I saw her - I knew she was my cat. A few days later, we were at the adoption fair at a nearby Petco. When her foster mom arrived, I knew my girl right away - she pushed the other kittens out of the way and strutted out of the carrier as if she owned the place! I picked her up, took her home, and she's been by my side ever since!

What a great story! It's ^[10]

What a great story! It's amazing how they do the smallest thing that shows they've chosen you. My cats just "friended" Rayne on Catbook!

hello! ^[14]

Love the story about how you found Rayne. My kitty Q did something of the same thing when I got him. Stole my heart for 17 years til he crossed the Rainbow Bridge. I have 2 new kittens who were rescues and I love them to death. I'm going to try to figure out how to let them 'friend' Rayne on Catbook

Oh, and I love World of Warcraft too :D
